

Man's Flight

Through Life Is

Sustained By The

Power Of His

Knowledge

TO HONOR

JOHN A. CAMPBELL

FLIGHT LIEUTENANT, ROYAL AIR FORCE

John "Red" Campbell learned to fly while still in high school and joined the Royal Air Force in December 1940. He completed his training and became a member of Number 121 Eagle Squadron as an operational Hurricane pilot in June 1941. In October 1941 he volunteered for combat duty in the Far East and flew in defense of Singapore. He was shot down in February 1942 and spent the remainder of the World War II in a Japanese prison camp. He left the RAF in November 1946 as a Flight Lieutenant, having been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

He Sacrificed His Freedom That Others Might Have Theirs

By: Alida Adams