JOSEF EIMANNSBERGER

Whose enormous dedication as a researcher of numerous WWII Allied crash sites in Germany has greatly aided and comforted the families of American airmen as those families have sought a better understanding of the experiences of crew members as they were captured or killed during the war. Josef's diligence and persistence has brought much personal meaning and insight to the affected crew members' relatives as they have sought information associated with the perilous circumstances involved with aircraft downed inside Germany during WWII. Josef's research in recent years has particularly aided the relatives of the crew of the B-17 on which Lt. Charles Eberhardt served, and which crashed near Aschheim, Germany on March 18, 1944.

Let Josef's work continue to reflect the bond between two great countries.
